AUTOMATIC KEYWORDS DETECTION

Summary: The aim of this work is present methods of keyword search in large volumes of text data stored on server-side commercial databases. Algorithms used to implement this task are described, together with an assessment of their relevance in the implementation of the practical. Implementation of the algorithm used procedural extension of the SQL language. Also the client application written in a higher level language that uses software algorithms on the server side is shown.